Psicologia Cognitiva Sternberg.pdf Psychologia Cognitiva Sternberg.pdf Psychologia Cognitiva Sternberg.pdf Psicologia Cognitiva Sternberg.pdf Woodrow Wilson Center Woodrow Wilson Center for International Scholars is a private American non-profit institution headquartered in Washington, D.C., dedicated to promoting public understanding of the history and policy of international affairs. It was founded in 1985 by Robert Zoellick, George W. Bush's first Secretary of State, and Alan Riding, an American writer, as the Zoellick-Riding Forum on International Affairs. In 1988, it changed its name to the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars. The Center is named for U.S. President Woodrow Wilson and is one of the premier institutions of international affairs in the United States. It is housed in a late-19th-century building originally known as the Wilson Library, with the Wilson Library on the same block and the Woodrow Wilson House also on the same block. The Wilson Library was designed by Henry Hobson Richardson and the Wilson House is a prominent example of Beaux-Arts architecture. Institution The Woodrow Wilson Center is an institution that advances international understanding and promotes public dialogue on the foreign policy challenges facing the United States and the world. It offers a range of public-policy programs, provides global networking opportunities, and hosts visiting scholars. Its endowed scholars program engages and includes individuals from all sectors of society, including experts from the private, academic, public, and non-profit sectors. The mission of the Woodrow Wilson Center is "to advance an engaged and informed public in a complex global society." Robert Zoellick, former U.S. Secretary of State under President George W. Bush, serves as the Center's president. Executive Director Jonathan Akavadu is the Center's senior policy adviser. Other senior leaders include Senior Vice President of Programs Trevor Potter and Senior Vice President for the Global Fellows Program Leslie Cagan. Wilson Library The Woodrow Wilson Center is housed in the historic Wilson Library, which dates to 1884 and was designed by architect Henry Hobson Richardson. The building's principal facade faces the White House, and the rear of the building faces Lafayette Park across 15th Street NW, a few blocks from the White House. The building is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. The Center began work on a new library on its block 2d92ce491b
